Hess was a simple proposition for New York almost from the start of the second game, twelve safeties being made off his offerings in a trifle over four innings. Then Noyes came in and did better for a while, but the home team bunched three safeties on him for a pair of runs in the

Charlie Herzog broke into the game again when he batted for Shafer in the sixth frame of the first encounter and played third base for the rest of the afternoon. He was good for two timely hits. Burns, however, with five safeties in eight times at the bat, was the most conspic uous sticksmith on the New York side while McDonald did equally well for Boston, having the same record.

The Braves started in on Fromme in the first game. A single by Maranville and a triple by Connolly gave them a run in the first, while hits by Titus and Tyler and a pass to Mann added another in the fourth. The seventh hit off the former Cincinnati twirler was a single by Connolly at the beginning of the fifth, and when Smith drew a pass, McGraw signalled for Crandall. McDonald was not at all overawed by Otis, and shot a single to right, scoring Connolly, Meyers dropping Murray's perfect throw to the plate. Burns made the first safety for New York off Tyler, a single grass on third. Herzog batted for Shafer and hit the ball too hard for Maranville to handle so Snodgrass counted.

Then came the winning rally in the seventh. Merkle started it with a single to centre and Murray followed with a sharp drive to left. A wild pitch moved both runners up a bag, and when Meyers rapped to left both scored. Cooper ran for the Indian and took second on Snodgrass's infield hit. Crandall forced Snow at second, but Cooper went to third. After Grant went in to run for Crandall Tyler uncorked another wild pitch, letting Cooper count with the run which tied the score, while Grant went to second. Stallings removed Tyler, but Burns, the first man to face James, the successor, doubled over third, scoring Grant.

It was an easy thing to win the second

A run was chalked up in the second, when Murray singled with two out, stole second and took third on Whaling's poor throw, scoring on Meyers's single. In the third singles by Matty, Burns and Fletcher added another, while Larry Doyle made the count three in the fourth by some daring base running. He first drew a pass, and while McDonald was tossing out Merkle continued running for third, which so astounded Myers that he
